

Henrietta Pichon

Title: What is it like to be a Black Student at a HSI?

Few Sentences:

HSI are slowly gaining recognition as diverse institutions, places in which one, mostly minority students, may feel a sense of kinship on campus in that they see others that look like them. The assumption that recognition that one minoritized group, will create lessons learned that all could benefit from is simply not the case. Simply stated, not all minoritized groups are the same; therefore, a one size fits all approach does not always work within an organization. First, one has to understand the stories of those minoritized groups within the organization and create best practices that best meet the needs of those groups. Namely, Black students at an HSI.

Henrietta Williams Pichon, Ph.D.
Associate Professor
P.O. Box 30001, MSC 3N
New Mexico State University